Human Müller cells (HMC) are non-neuronal cells that form the main glial component of the inner retina. They have emerged as important components of the innate immune system and thereby may modulate the inflammatory response and play a key role in innate immunity. To identify potentially relevant secreted factors, we performed a secretome analysis on HMC using affinity chromatography with an anti-Müller cell antibody and a protein array. From the list of target proteins, we selected four representative candidates (APOE, CD109, CTHRC1, and CD14) and validated their differential secretion by ELISA and Western blot. APOE and CD14 were secreted in higher amounts by HMC than the other candidates. HMC release these two factors via distinct pathways: (1) APOE in active form is secreted via exosomes, and (2) CD14 is secreted as a soluble protein. Furthermore, we found that neither lipopolysaccharides nor cytokines affect the secretion

Hello GUYZ This is the 64 bit version of Indicator because some User of this Version have problem with the installation of 32bit version. Today a really nice and great offer I found on Internet, all the Indicators of the Site were very useful and very easy to install. So I decided to give a try with this one. I put the correct Folder (with the files) in the install folder. The installation was very easy and it took me a few minutes only. Once the installation was finished, I went to the install window that was open and clicked the "Use" button. After I saw the installation completed and all the files were added to the program I installed the Indicator and was ready. The installation was done without any problem, it was as easy as it was said in the description. The main difference is that when you start the application you will see two arrows on top left corner of the window, one of them will lead you to the Technical Analysis tab and the other one will lead you to the option of which Indicator will be used. The options that I can see are the following: Momentum: That is the Indicator that will be used. The main difference with Momentum is that instead of showing the time period for which the support/resistance zone is active, it will show the time of the signal in hours, minutes and seconds. You can also select to not show this time zone in the indicator, so it will be just a simple line (you can see that in the picture). RSI: Here you will see the option to select the indicator that will be used. You can also see the graph that represents the RSI and you can select the time period for which it will be shown. MACD: MACD is the Indicator that was presented on the website. ADX: ADX was presented on the website too. ROC: That was presented too. Wick: The Wick is an Indicator that I have never used before. That was said on the website too. EMA: Here you will see that EMA will be used. Momentum: That was presented too. Conclusion: I have to say that all the Indicators are great and I am very happy to have them. In addition, they work perfectly. The only two problems
