Q: How does one use the NOT operator (!) in the PowerShell ISE? How does one use the "!" operator in powershell ISE? According to here the operator appears to evaluate to "$true;" and not "TRUE" as I expect. What could cause the ISE to evaluate it differently? Shouldn't it be the same? A: The canonical precedence of logical operators in the Visual Studio compiler is as follows: Not equals is operator is placed after and Logical not is placed after or Logical and is placed before and Logical or is placed before or Logical or is placed before and Not is placed after or The precedence of and and or are well defined, and commutative and associative. Logical not (and not or) has the lowest precedence and therefore evaluates before every other operator. This includes and and or. But precedence only affects the order of evaluation, not what happens. Consider the following example: if((b -c) -a)... That is, Initially, -c is evaluated by the first statement. After that, -a and -c are evaluated by the second statement The resulting value is passed as argument to the third statement. But -c will not be evaluated at all, because you first have to evaluate the full logical expression to determine whether it is -a or not. A: The other answers are technically true, but they're not telling the whole story about how the PowerShell Integrated Scripting Environment evaluates

In the future human beings have changed the way they look at combat. Machines have taken over much of the workforce, but the human spirit lives on. You are the hero of a new species, and your mission is to save humanity from a plague. You are the last hope for a humanity that has left Earth behind, and are the new species that has taken to the stars. It is your duty to preserve human culture, and save what is left of the great human race. A new life awaits you on a far away system with lots of wild life and a wild wild west. In this third person shooter, you have access to different weapons from assault rifles and shotguns to energy blasters. You can also boost your ship, if you have the right upgrades. You will have to complete a mission to earn cash that can be used to purchase these upgrades and new weaponry. Every minute and every mission, everything will be a gamble. You will need to be ready to risk your life to save humanity, and earn cash to outfit yourself and purchase your next ship. Once you are outfitted with new weaponry, your ship can be customized with a variety of new elements. Everything your ship does is important! We just got a new weapon that hits a lot harder than before and might be game-changing. But we also realize that it's very important to have a nice look. We will be tweaking that with a price drop and buffing all the classes. Game Features:

- Do whatever the heck you want. Your actions will influence your rank in four areas: Mining, Combat, Exploration, and Trading. Your actions will also influence your rank within the four factions.
- Build a ship for every situation. The four factions have different ship designs, with each faction having unique access to specific upgrades. Each faction will have different benefits and drawbacks when it comes to being the top bully in your area. For example, the Tranquil faction focuses on mining and will have no ship upgrades when you are being aggressive. The Ambush faction focuses on defense and will require upgrades to their ships or it will be hard for them to survive. Each faction has their own exclusive ship from the pre-alpha build.
- Buy or steal a new ship for every situation. Trade ships for the resources you need and sell the rest. Our leader ship has the best weaponry, so it can hold its own against any outlaw
